Dorothy Leary: "Si, do you know who's going to publish your book for you?"

SRP: "No, I don't."

DL: "How do you plan on finding a publisher?"

SRP: "I suppose I shall use the LMP and see what I can come up with. I don't seem to have any connections or contacts in the publishing world who can help me out in this instance, so I don't know what else I can do."

DL: "I have a friend who is one of the vice presidents of Harcourt Brace Jovanovich who I can speak to for you if you like. His name is William A. Pullin."

SRP: "I'd like that very much. Thank you. I'll let you know when the book is ready to be read."

SRP: "Dorothy, I am happy to tell you that my book will ready to be read next Friday, the 3rd."

DL: "Si, how wonderful. I'll speak to my friend William Pullin and arrange a meeting for you with him. Tell me the title so I can tell him what it's about when I speak to him."

SRP: "It's called COMPARATIVE AESTHETICS: A WORKBOOK."
